Taking the Quiz

At Bridge To Partnership we work with specific values that fall into three systems. This is a unique approach, and one that has profound implications for effective and ethical decision-making.

This quiz was designed to give you a personal experience of the importance of understanding values in this way and the possible implications for your own decision-making.

There are no right or wrong answers. However, values can be misapplied to situations which results in unintended consequences and even corruption. Perhaps you have had that experience?

From a systems point of view each of the three systems of values we work with has a different intent or purpose. This purpose forms the context for decision-making. Once the context has been 'chosen' (this is a very quick, often emotional, and unconscious process) then all of that system's values come into play.

You might wish to make a note of your answers so that you can refer to them while reading the report or during the workshop.

Rank each of the values on the level of important it has to you.
1 is less important and 5 is VERY important.
You may use as many 5s as you would like.
